

Merger Update

Putting $116,000 on the table to fight hunger

During September, Hunger Action Month, Wings joined with members and employees to support local Colorado hunger-relief organizations.

With one in eight Coloradans facing food insecurity, Wings donated $100,000 to local food banks and collected food donations at service centers. Our employees were hands-on, and joined Care and Share Food Bank of Southern Colorado for a challenge that took Hunger Action Month to new heights. Together, the team built an incredible 11-foot, 5-inch food tower, breaking the unofficial Guinness record for the tallest food tower.

Thanks to member and employee support, Wings:

- Raised an additional $16,000 which will be distributed among local partners
- Collected nearly 6,000 pounds of non-perishable food
- Employees volunteered 180 hours at local food banks

"We're so grateful to everyone that made this effort a success. Whether someone gives, volunteers, advocates or simply starts a conversation, every action helps move us closer to a future where fewer families have to wonder where their next meal will come from," said Annie Snead, Wings vice president of community impact.

Making room for inspiration

Great organizations invest in great talent. That's why Wings contributed toward the Inspiration Room at Columbia Middle School in Aurora.

By teaming up with Broncos cornerback Patrick Surtain (through the Patrick Surtain II Foundation) and the Campos Foundation, a Science, Technology, Engineering, Arts and Math (STEAM) classroom was transformed to give students access to professional-grade photography equipment, digital art resources and a collaborative environment.

Our ongoing commitment to Colorado Communities helps level the playing field for students in financially disadvantaged communities statewide. "That starts with opportunities like this and quality education," said Annie Snead, Wings vice president of community impact.

Up, up and away at Labor Day Lift Off!

We had a fantastic Labor Day weekend at the 50th Annual Colorado Springs Labor Day Lift Off, connecting with members and thousands of visitors at one of the community's most beloved traditions. Our team enjoyed handing out Wings goodies and giving attendees a chance to win Broncos-themed prizes. Plus, our United We Rock drawing winner Debby H. took her first ever hot-air balloon flight.

Celebrating at the Lakewood Service Center

We recently opened our 62nd Colorado service center in Lakewood and celebrated during our grand opening week with sweet treats and giveaways. We're honored to be part of the Lakewood community!

Come visit us at 280 S Union Blvd, Lakewood, CO.
